It's early morning on the African plain

AND OUR HERD IS ON THE MOVE AGAIN.

All this endless walking, DAY AFTER DAY,

is exhausting and makes MY HEAD PAIN.

So I quietly slip away,
from mom's watchful eyes

AND RELAX FOR A BIT, TO WATCH THE BUTTERFLIES.

"ALFONSO," mom calls.
"I'm counting to three.

STOP FOOLING AROUND
and come here to me."

I groan and turn and run,
back to my nagging mother.
But I don't see the log.

OH, BROTHER!

I FLY THROUGH THE AIR ...

... AND COME CRASHING DOWN.

My head sticks deep inside a termite mound.
