

... but then the odds were always against humans, ever since they first walked on this planet – even more than all those other species that exist only as fossils – because we had the mixed blessing and curse of human intelligence and culture, our ultimate entropy pumps.